Group 1 – Reciprocal revocation of 7 Individuals' License privileges under the Interstate wildlife Violators Compact

- Five of these individuals were convicted of wildlife violations that, if they were in New Mexico, would have accrued at least 20 points, thus being subject to having their license privileges revoked.
- They all went through the original state's due process before having their privileges revoked.
- The recommended time period is determined by the end date of the original revocation.
- Two of these individuals failed to appear in court, or to comply with the conditions of a wildlife citation. Under the Compact, member states suspend their license privileges until they are in compliance with the original citation.
